RESUMEN

En este artículo se pasa revista a la evolución de la investigación que han hecho sobre la ciudad varias disciplinas académicas, en particular la Geografía, en tanto que espacio físico o urbis, desde principios del siglo XX hasta la actualidad. Esta revisión y puesta al día se centra en el trabajo realizado por investigadores españoles pero recurre también a las imprescindibles referencias a la dinámica epistemológica y metodológica de los estudios urbanos y urbanísticos a nivel internacional, fundamentalmente europeos, puesto que el trabajo de los autores españoles ha ido siguiendo y enmarcándose en los paradigmas y métodos predominantes en nuestro entorno académico y científico.

Palabras clave: geografía urbana, historia urbana, urbanismo, ciudad, espacio urbano.

ABSTRACT

In this paper the research on developments that several academic disciplines, especially Geography, have done about the city, since the early twentieth century to the present, is analysed. City is understood as urbis or physical space. This state of the art focuses on the studies conducted by Spanish researchers, which have followed and framed themselves within the predominant paradigms and methods of our scientific and academic environment. That is why the study also refers to epistemological and methodological dynamics of urban studies at the international level, and mainly at the European level.

Keywords: urban geography, urban history, urbanism, city, urban space.
